

Parents,

Our School Board made the decision last night to use self-paced, asynchronous (no-live instruction) eLearning for the 3 required Make Up Days due to Hurricane Helene. Langston has always focused on following Greenville County Schools scheduling in order to support our families that have students in both school systems. Langston will be modeling these make up days after Greenville County Schools plan for self-paced E-Learning Days Due to Hurricane Helene:

Hurricane Helene was an unusual event resulting in widespread power outages for an extended period of time, which made it impossible for Greenville County Schools, and most districts in our area, to conduct eLearning during the eight days schools were closed.

In accordance with state law, the State Department of Education is requiring districts to make up three of the days missed during Hurricane Helene, which will then allow our local school board to excuse three days and the State Board of Education to excuse three days.

The district administration is proposing a plan to meet these requirements to the GCS Board of Trustees. Upon approval, Greenville County Schools will make up three days missed from Hurricane Helene using self-paced, asynchronous (no live instruction) eLearning on the following days: Friday, March 14; Friday, April 18; and Saturday, May 10. Students and teachers will not need to be online for these makeup days; teachers will provide students with assignments that can be completed within five school days upon return to school.
